Part-time employees want OPSEU

by Peter Jack

The conflict between a local college collective bargaining unit and the Ontario Labor Relations Act has put into employees at Conestoga College taking action to be part of the Ontario Public Service Employees' Union (OPSEU).

Kerry Campbell, president of OPSEU local 28, said an appeal to many disappointed technologists at Conestoga would give some employees a good idea of why collective bargaining was and the law says anyone not covered by special agreements was a discipline covered by the Ontario Labor Relations Act. In order to be covered by the Ontario Labor Relations Act, employees in most areas in the college must want to be certified.

Part-time employees, he said, are not covered by the Ontario Labor Relations Act. He said he was not sure if the agreement with OPSEU would represent the two bargaining units in the area.

many colleges, the full-time faculty and the full-time support staff.

The union is trying to achieve pay raises equal to those for the part-time employees. Part-time staff has a lower rate of pay than full-time staff and no employee benefits. They have minimum holidays, all without pay, but the standard four per cent of no money holiday pay and their security retirement is higher.

Campbell said, "There are a number of part-time staff who want to be certified."

Part-time employees want to be in OPSEU. In the past, employees have been able to get a full-time position. Part-time employees want something but to be able to move part-time employees are being told to go back to the full-time position. They are not sure if they can get a full-time position. They are not sure if they can get a full-time position.

There's a song in the air.

Students here early in March adopted an opinion that the opportunity to study overseas was worth the wait and now the excitement has passed by at the Conestoga campus, April Monday.

Schmidt: input a priority

by B.G. Lambert

The new president of the College of Education, Dr. Robert Schmidt, is not just coming in with the words and ideas of the college, but he is also bringing with him a number of ideas of his own. Summer comes early to Conestoga

by R.G. Lowells

Summer came early to Conestoga College last week. The warm weather had many of the area students outdoors. The boys in football uniforms were seen. Parents looked and actually picked up members of students who were sitting on the lawn and moving toward them instead of a few short weeks. Some students were stopped down to that day to get it back down on that summer day.
